The White House must now decide what to do with its stical white elephants—the cabin cruisers Patricia and Julie. It appears that buyers were deterred by a condition put on sale—that the yachts are for pleasure only, not for comrcial use. An official said the condition was put on the sale.

President Nixon himself, probably so that the craft "could to be made into gambling casinos or for some other notorious."

Additionally, the minimum bids set—$100,000 for the Patricia d $60,000 for the Julie—may have been a bit too high for e venerable vessels, used by five presidents.

The 92-foot Patricia has overnight accommodations for only o people, and the 64-foot Julie has bunk space for only six. th vessels have overlarge dining and lounge areas. During Ekennedy years and Johnson years, the Patricia was known the Honey Fitz and the Julie sailed under the name Patrick J. Brochures of the Nixon sale were mailed to 5,800 potential

Vietnamization Vs. Negotiation

The real difference between Washington and Salgon on negotiating a Vietnam settlement is this: the Nixon administration, to satisfy a domestic demand if not to offer "the other side" an attractive alternative to hattle, holds out to it the chance to gain by negotiation a certain share of the political power in Sooth Vletnam. In his own most succinct statement of this purpose, Mr. Nixon said on April 20. "A fair political solution should reflect the existing relationship of political forces within South Vietnam." Mr. Rogers followed this up with his suggestion that "the Communists may decide it is in their best interests to negotiate an agreement which gives them representation proportionate to their numbers."

The Thieu government, however, does not wish to offer the other side any share of the political power, by negotiations or otherwise. It wants to keep that power in one package and to hold on to the whole package itself. President Thien evidently feels-and surely he has reason to know-that a political solution which reflected the existing relationship of political forces would jeopardize his regime's survival. Lacking confidence in his own political appeal, he tries continoally to substitute for it American military and economic power.

The second difference between Washington and Saigon follows from this basic one. The administration, seeking—at least in theory-to divide the power in South Vietnam and to distribute the pieces to different factions, has thought of several techniques or approaches to that end. "We recognize the complexity of shaping machinery that would fairly apportion political power in South Vietnam," Mr. Nixon said April 20. "We're flexible." His aides explained that "machinery" could involve elections or some other procedure, so long as it reflected popular choice and was not "imposed."

But the Thien-Ky government, wishing neither to divide nor to lose the political power, has endorsed only one kind of "machinery,"-i.e., elections. It did so last year according to a formula which it elaborated in virtually full confidence that the formula would not be acceptable to its Vietnamese rivals, as indeed it hasn't been.

Now, if the Nixon goal of "fairly apportioning political power" means anything at all, it means some sort of coalition government. What else can it mean? The trouble with saying this out loud, however, is that-as the President noted on Monday-coslition government has somehow become what he called a "code word" for a Communist takethat coalitions have gone that route only. as in Eastern Europe after World War II. when the Soviet Army was immediately on hand to help the local Communist party-a condition not obtaining in Vietnam, or for that matter, in Finland, Italy, France or Laos, among others who have taken Communists into some form of coalition government in recent years. Nonetheless, the myth is so powerful that even a historyminded American President cringes before it.

This is unfortunate, for no matter what one chooses to call it-"coalition government," "sharing power," "fair apportionment of political power" or what have you-the concept is crucial to a compromise and to winning both public support and enemy acceptance for it.

We suspect that Presidient Thien understands this very well. He opposes any coalition, "imposed" or not. The last thing he wants is a "fair apportionment of political power." Indeed, he works against the concept every chance he gets. Hence his sly crack last Sunday that Secretary Rogers had created "some misunderstanding." Hence his insistence that he will not let Communists or neutralists (so designated by him), or anyone whom he chooses to throw in jail, participate in South Vietnamese politics. Against such assertions, against his record of political jailings, aainst his stark interest in his own eurvival. Mr. Nixon's assurances that President Thieu is pledged to a "free election" ring hollow.

In fact, there is a quality of shadow play to the whole discussion of negotiating terms. Early in his administration, Mr. Nixon had two tracks to his Vietnam policy-negotiation and Vietnamization. His explicit threat to the other side was to negotiate quickly with the United States or to face a strong and self-sustaining Sonth Vietnamese foe later. Well, 18 months have gone by and no negotiation has occurred, but Vietnamization, according to the administration, is going swimmingly. Saigon, for the reasons cited, seems never to have wanted to talk shadow than substance. On a host seriously. Hanoi and the Viet Cong evidently have placed their bets on protracted war, figuring to outlast Washington's direct support of Saigon. Mr. Nixon's own devotion to negotiations has never heen beyond challenge, to put it mildly, if for no other reason than the fact that negotiation and Vietnamization are, by their nature, contradic- surfaced again, tory aims. Or at least they become so, in

It is difficult, on the one hand, to build up the Thieu-Ky regime in the interest of turning over more and more of the war. hurden to the South Vietnamese, while simultaneously exerting pressure on the government to broaden its base and make other bargaining concessions in the interest of a settlement. Inevitably, you have to choose-unless, of course, the North Vietnamese become so impressed by the selfsufficiency of the South that they decide to try to strike a deal with us rather than wait to deal with a Saigon government capa-

That could still happen. But the prospect is not heightened by President Thieu's attitude. He sounds more than ever determined to go the Vietnamization route, giving away nothing, playing for our unquestioning support. And for all his talk of flexibility. Mr. Nixon sounds increasingly ready to accept the inevitable contradiction between Vietnamization and negotiation-and to proceed down the Vietnamization track.

Loss for Modern Torvism

Iain Norman Macleod might have become prime minister of Great Britain with better luck in timing, and there would have been no doubt about his government's direction. He was the epitome of modern Toryismeven more so than Edward Heath or Reginald Maudling, with whom he had worked under R. A. Butler to give their party's policies a drastic facelifting and updating in the years out of office after the war.

The son of a Yorkshire physician, he believed deeply in the National Health Service instituted by a Labor government and gave it vigorous direction as Minister of Health, He was a more skillful Minister of Labor than any Labor party occupant of that office in postwar Britain. But it was as an energetic colonial secretary, responding to Harold Macmillan's "winds of change" thesis, that Mr. Macleod provoked the wrath of Conservatives nostalgic for the heyday of empire, and this may have cost him his chance to be prime minister.

Mr. Macleod was a man of courage who asked no quarter from political foes despite pain from a progressive arthritic condition that derived from a war wound. With the Conservative victory in June, he had plunged into his job as Chancellor of the Exchequer with all of his old drive and verve. His death at 56 is a severe loss for his party and his country.

The present issue revolves about a very modest proposal put for-ward by the United States and backed by the West Germans and some others to improve on the existing system of currency exchange rates. The idea is to avoid. if possible, the traumatic international crises that develop when major countries are forced to devalue, or in other ways change the value of their money.

Dollar Center

Bot France resists the introduction of even a small element of flexibility into the existing system for a number of reasons. An important one is that is might exalt the dollar, which, they say, elready threatens to become "the center of the solar system."

Instead, the French are anxious for the development of a monetary union within the Common Market which-even if a single currency did not develop for many years would tend to offset what the French consider to be U.S. economic dominance.

Thus, Mr. Pompidou's Gaulliam is more sophisticated than the general's own version. He is not proposing e new war on the dollar. But his indirect attack, which seems to be succeeding, is to stall the American drive for mors flexibility, even to the extent of blackmailing the British, who also see the wisdom of freeing the present system from some of its existing rigidities.

Maurice Schumann French Foreign Minister, has made clear to the British that their revived Common Market application will be vetoed by the French, unless the U.K. agrees to the community's position that among themselves that all of the flexibility is measthey will not take advantage of exchange rate margins that might later be agreed upon by the International Monetary Fund.

Nevertheless, I think that Bill Cosby-also mentioned in the same item-and other blacks cannot nnequivocally condemn Stepin Fetchit for his movie roles, unless we condemr the majority of black men who survived that period without making effective protest. As I see it, Stepin Fetchit depicted, with broad gestures, the posture of Black America, as that area related to the White America of his times, From all accounts of his performances, Stepin Fetchit did a more memorable portrayal than whites such as Jolson, the creators of Amos n' Andy, and inferior imitators who viciously and minstrelly castigated black Amer-political scientist and part-time campsign consultant, "that increased information would produce greater understanding of, support for and participation in the political process. What we have been getting in recent years is exactly the opposite. The greater the volume of politics on television, the more the voters seem to be mentally tuning ont.

The more vivid and immediate television's depiction of war in Vietnam, crime in the streets or conflict in the cities becomes, the more the viewers tend to regard those problems as beyond the solution of any politician.
One result—found in the private polling of candidates in several states this year—is an unprece-dentedly bigb percentage of "in-formed voters" who say they are uncertain how they will vote. One public opinion analyst who has looked at the polls for a number of candidates remarked that any incumbent who runs this year on his record as a problem-solver is asking for defeat." The clearest sign of the "alienetion phenomenon" these men discern is non-voting. Primaries this year in states as dissimilar as New Yerk, Virginia and Iowa have produced record or near-record low turnouts.

When voters don't vote or say they are uncertain how they will vote, the politicians' rule-of-thumb is that the incumbents are in trouble. The axiom is: When in doubt, they vote them out,

But that rule may not apply this year. The incumbents are doing rather well so far in the primaries. Roughly two-thirds of the House and Senate nominations have now been settled and only seven incumbents one senator and six representatives seeking renomina-

Uncertain Past

As for the historical precedent of Democratic congressional gains in every off-year contest following the election of a Republican president, that too may be suspect.

In those past presidential years. the GOP candidate has pulled a heavy vote, part of which provided coattails for Republican congressional candidates. In 1968, however, the vote was small by presidential standards and Richard Nixon-faced with two opponents on the presidential line-trailed, rather than led, the Republican congressional candidates.

Instead of the usual big gain for the party taking over the presidency, the Republicans won only four additional House seats with Mr. Nixon.

Which is just one more reason why American pundits may eat as ch crow this November as the British forecasters did in June.

Nixon's College Plans to Assemble Oral History of His Early Career NEW YORK, July 22 (NYT) .- President Nixon has taken the first formal step toward assembling a comprehensive historical record of his political career, which will eventually be placed in the Richard M. Nixon Presidential Library.

A source close to the President disclosed yesterday that Mr. Nixon entrusted to his alma mater. Whittier College, in California, the task of undertaking an oral history program covering his youth and early years in politics.

The decision was taken during a private meeting the President had at the White House last week with Frederick Binder, president of the small Quaker college just south of Los Angeles, the source said.

The President apparently was guided by a recommendation from the Richard M. Nixon Foundation, a group formed last year by the President's friends and supporters across the country to plan ann build the presidential library and museum, The decision to locate the oral history project at Whittier College was confirmed yesterday by the foundation's chairman, Leonard K. Firestone, of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co.

Reached by telephone in Akron, Ohio, Mr. Firestone said: Many of the President's aunts and uncles and cousins live in the area as well as his early political associates, who will be interviewed in connection with the project." The college has already earmarked $50,000 to hire a historian and pay for a staff of professional interviewers for the first year of the program's operation, Mr. Firestone said. He indicated that some of the money will be raised by friends of the President,

Petrofina Vies For Dutch Co. With Bayer

AMSTERDAM, July 22 (Reu-ters).—Farbenfabriken Bayer AG, has decided to bid for shares of the Dutch paint and varnish firm 5.45 International Coating Material NV 1.41 (ICM), Algemene Bank Nederland said today.

Shareholders of ICM can exchange their holdings on the basis of one 100-guilder nominal share of ICM for three 50-mark nominal shares of Bayer. In Brussels, Petrofina SA said today it is studying the rival bid for ICM shares. The Bayer bid values ICM shares at about 440 guilders ($120), compared with Petrofina's 415 guilder

The Whys Investor.

Before you invest your money you'd be well advised to ask a few questions. And depending on how many different managed in the major growth areas of people you ask you'll get a lot of different answers. Gramco* has gone ahead and prepared some answers for you. Based on cold hard facts. In the form of two simple graphs. The first shows that stocks and shares have not been performing very well. The second says that USIF, Real Estate has a proven record of success.

USIF, Real Estate is the world's largest mutual fund investing primarily in choice income-producing property in the USA.

Since the Fund's inception in January 1967 its shares have appreciated 48.9% (as of June 30, 1970). That's better than 13% a year. United States real estate has proved to be one of the safest, most predictable, profitable investments in the world. And virtually immune to the short-term fluctuations of the stock market. Everybody needs somewhere to live. Somewhere to shop. Somewhere to work. So there's always a need for the right kind of property. The USIF, Real Estate portfolio contains more than 220 such properties. expertly chosen and professionally the USA. They include office skyscrapers. Luxury high-rise apartment houses. Residential complexes. Prestige shopping centers. Motels. Industrial parks. And science and research centers,

These properties are occupied by tenants who include some of the world's largest corporations. The kind of tenants who can be relied upon to pay their rent regularly. The Fund's real estate properties are worth over $800 million, and additional properties are purchased each month. Which means that the investor in USIF, Real Estate may soon have a beneficial interest in a billion dollar portfolio.

If these facts and figures have answered a few of your questions, mail the coupon below or contact your nearest Gramco financial counselor. He'll give you the whys and wherefores of being a wise investor.

Cranberry Co. Sues Napoleon's Brother

By John Darnton
TRENTON, N. J., July 22
(NYT).—Joseph Bonaparte, once the king of Naples and Sicily, once the monarch of Spain, who helped his youngerbrother, Napoleon, preside over a conquered Europe with su-pine grace, and who has been dead these 126 years, has been named as a defendant in a suit brought by a cranberry company in Bordentown, N. J. Ocean Spray Cranberries, ducer of cranberries and cranberry products, filed the action in superior court July 6 in an attempt to establish full title to two strips of land adjoining its area manufacturing plant six miles south of here.

1,500 Acres

The land was among 1,500 acres purchased by Joseph Bonaparte when he settled in Bordentown, surrounded by an impressive entourage and suming the title Comte de Survilliers, after his brother's de-feat at Waterloo in 1815. In June. 1836, when he had returned to Europe, the elder Bonaparte granted a deed to the Camden and Amboy Rail-road and Transportation Co. for an 11-acre parcel to serve as right-of-way for the state's first railroad. A clause in the deed called for the parcel to revert to his estate if the railroad ceased to use it.

Beveral years ago, Ocean Spray acquired two strips of land parallel to the railroad bed— one 9 feet by 630 feet and the other 38 feet by 109 feet-from the United New Jersey Rail-road and Canal Co. This company had obtained the land during a consolidation of transportation systems in 1872.

But the cranberry company, which wants to expand, does not feel comfortable in its ownership as long as the verter clause" remains on the books, and it has brought suit to strike it down. Other Defendants

In addition to Joseph, the defendants include his wife. Julie Clary, a rich banker's daughter who died in 1845, his two daughters. Zenaide and Charlotte, and 16 other named descendants.

The clerk's files here have rarely seen such a notable list of princes, cardinals and

"I'm not afraid of ghosts." remarked Edward V. Lipman, area manager of Ocean Spray, whose central office is in Hanson, Mass. "As long as I have a good lawyer, why should I worry?"

The lawyer, Henry B. Tutek, who has been researching the Bonaparte family tree for over a year, said he believed that the American branch of the family expired in 1945 with the death of one Jerome Napoleon Charles Bonaparte. The Euro-pean branch of direct descen-dants ended. he maintained, in 1949 with Eugenie Ney d'Elchingen, who bore no children from her husband. Napoleon.

"If anybody should raise claim, the burden of proof would be upon them to demonstrate that they are an heir and prove their relationship," observed Mr. Tutek, falls by default to the company.

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott

One of the biggest swings against the Dallas Aces in the qualifying play for the world championship in Stockholm last month occurred on the diagramed deal against Brazil. The Aces, of course, survived the setheck and went on to win the world title.

The Brazilians use the Roman System, which has helped to win many world championships, and this accounts for the strange start to the auction. North was unable to bid one diamond, as a standard bidder would do, for any rebid would have given a wrong picture in his methods.

The system permits an opening bid in a three-card suit when a five-card suit is in reserve, so North ventured one heart. This was forcing, and South's one spade was a negative response: two clubs by him would have shown slightly more high-card strength.

East-West knew, of course, that one spade was artificial, so West's bid of two spades clearly showed spades. East raised spades, and decided he had enough defensive strength to double when South finally introduced his club suit and was raised to game. West had an obvious lead of the spade ace, but had a crucial problem to soive at the second trick. There was something to be said for continuing spades, a passive play aimed at forcing dummy to ruff and leaving declarer to find his

A shift to hearts offered a prospect of developing a trick quickly in that suit, but was if he held two or three hearts headed by the queen or ten, but not both.

West's actual lead at the second trick was the diamond four.

He was no doubt allowing for the possibility that South held diamond losers and might gain a discard on bearts. East won the diamond and continued the suit. The Brazilian declarer, O.G. de Faria, was now in full control. He won with the diamond king and used dummy's club entries to establish the fifth diamond. This eventually provided a discard for the losing heart and the contract was made.

JAPAN: FROM PREHISTORY TO MODERN TIMES

By John Whitney Hall. Delacorte. 395 pp. $9.95 JAPAN: THE STORY OF A NATION

By Edwin O. Reischauer, Knopf. 345 pp. 3635. Reviewed by Thomas Lask

IT is a safe bet that Americans know less about Japan than any country with which they have been inti-mately concerned. We fought a devastating war with it, have bad emotional hangups and guilt feelings over the use of the two atomic bombs. and have carried out one of the most remarkable and suc-cessful "occupations" a victor nation ever imposed on a beaten foe.

It may well be that the greatest memorial to Gen. Douglas MacArthur will be his administration of Japan under the occupation rather than any battle fought during the war.

Japan is now a major trade partner and an economic rival and a puzzling element in our defense calculation in the Far Fast. Yet most Americans know little of its history. less of the shape and development of its institutions and nothing of its great men. These books, by Hall, professor of history at Yale, and by Reischauer, former ambassador to Japan and now on the Harvard faculty, can help remedy that deficiency. Since they cover the ground from the beginnings through the occupation, they are bound to be somewhat summary. But both deal with the larger flow of events and with the powerful figures who influenced them. They touch only lightly on cultural matters, but devote a fair amount of their space to religious belief. To the nature and place of Shintoism, Bud-dhism and Confucianism, since all were organic parts of Japanese existence and were used in the making of government policy.

In addition, the books supplement each other. Two-thirds of the Reischauer volume, a rewritten and updated version of his earlier "Japan; Past and Present," is devoted to the years since the Meljil restoration, in roughly 1868. But only 25 percent of Hall's book is given over to that period. Thus each volume thickens what is thin in the other.

In the long view it is notable how the patterns of Japanese history repeat themselves, Japa-nese administrators preferred some venerated institution rather than in their own name. For example, the emperor is to most Americans the most conspicuous aspect of Japanese rule and seemingly the source of all power. But, generally, he never had any power at all. Reisch-auer is the authority for the statement that the emperor's decision to surrender to the Allies in the last war was "the first important political decision a Japanese empera made since ancient times For long periods he was lected and virtually ab Yet the office was never all ed to disappear. hierarchy was not elimi but was utilized by those had supplanted them. seems to have been such eration for hereditary of that the trappings were even when the power shifted.

Notable too is the fact when change came to Japan almost invariably came the top. There appears to no tradition of effective class revolt in Japan h when one man did come to the lowest stratum of soc as did Hideyoshi in the century, he soon moved thwart the political aspirat of the lower classes.

Brother of Majestic Prince Brings $510,000 at Auction in Lexington

By Gerald Strine

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 22 (WP).-Frank McMahon paid a worldecord $510,000 for a yearling at the Kenneland sales here Monday night. The yearling is a full brother to Majestle Prince, who carried McMahon's colors to victory in the 1969 Kentucky Derby and Preakness

The bidding on the handsome chestnut son of Raise a Native—Gay Hostass by Royal Charger required only five minutes 25 seconds. The colt was consigned by Leslie B. Combs II, owner of Spendthrift Farm Canada's Jennifer Meldrum 4738 mained in New York near Lexington.

McMahon, accompanied by trainer Johnny Longden, engaged in a sharp bidding duel with trainer Arnold Winick from the $400,000 It required only 35 seconds for the bidding to reach $450,000, easily topping the $405,000 set here in 1968 when Wendell Rosso paid that amount for a Sea-Bird—Libra filly. The previous high for a yearling Wintek took command of the action at $455,000. McMahon answere at $500,000. Nearly two minutes later Winick nodded at $505,000. Thirty seconds later McMahon bid $510,000 and Winick immediately left his seat and congratulated the California oil man, Winick trains horses for several wealthy patrons at his Delray, Fla., headquarters.

The Loved Ones

WASHINGTON - This is a government of reports and studies. No matter what happens in this nation, the first solution is to appoint a commission to study lt. The commissions take one year, two

It is pulet and deserted, and

Mr. Gottfried Snellenbach has been carctaker of the burial area for government reports aince the Harding administration, and after I assured him I would not dig up any of the graves, he let me enter the large well-kopt grounds.

"We've got some of the great reports of all times buried here." Mr. Snellenbach said. "We've got reports that cost $20 million, and we've got reports that cost $2,000 but in the end they all wind up here, burled six feet under.

"Sir, what kind of reports are resting here?" "It might be better to ask what kind of reports aren't buried here. We baye reports on violeoce, studies on blacks, students, unemployment, the economy, the Communist threat, housing, health care, law and order. You name it. and we've buried lt."

"How does a report find its flual resting spot in this settime?

"Well, as you know, the President is always appointing a commission to study something or other, and after the study they're supposed to hand in a report. Now, lots of times the President has no intention of paying any attention to the report, and it's dead before it's even written. Other times someone on the President's staff reads a report handed in by a commission and says. This stuff is dynamite. We have to kill

"In some cases, the President says. 'Let's release this report to the press and then bury it.' Occasionally a report will just dle of heartbreak because nobody pays any attention to it.

"In any case, after the report is dead, it has to be buried, because if you're President you don't want someone finding it at a later date and using it against you.

"So every week each report that has died is placed in a pine box and loaded on a government hearse and brought on here, where we have a simple ceremony before lowering it into the ground.

"If it's a blue ribbon panel report that's been killed in action, we give it a 21-gun salute. Otherwise, we lay it to rest with as little fuss as possible." "This cemetery goes for miles and miles," I said. "No one knows how many reports have been buried liere by the different presidents."

"Mr. Suellenbach, this is a beautiful cemetery, and very impressive, but why does the government go to so much trouble and expense to keep it up for nothing more than paper reports?"

"You must understand that most of the men asked to serve oo presidential commissions are very important citizens. They spend ounths and years working on these reports, and they feel very close to them. When their reports are killed or buried, these men feel a personal loss. Many days you will see them sitting here next to the tombstones of their studies, tears rolling down their cheeks.

No matter bow long you work here, it still gets to you."

Sarah, the Chimp, Has Mastered Grammar

By George Getze

SANTA BARBARA, Calif.—A 7-year-old chimpanzee at the University of California bere can understand the uses of grammar, including its use in communicating with human beings. She even understands and uses correctly the conditional mood-something children have difficulty mastering. The chimp. Sarah, is the pupil of Dr. David Premack, a professor of psychology here. Her accomplishments are forcing science to take longer and closer looks at language. Dr. Premack was at Cambridge University last week explaining Sarah's longuage skills at an international meeting of neuropsychologists. Sarah can't say words. A chimpanzee can be taught some imitative grunts and hisses, but the vocal cords, larynx, tongue and lips of chimpanzees, man's closest relative, are not made for speech. Dr. Premack said, bowever, that the concept of language is not dependent on associating sounds with meanings. We read symbols that have no associated sounds-pointing arrows, green, red and amber traffic lights are examples-and so does Sarah. She has a "vocabulary" of about 130 plastic symbols that stand for things, actions, names and some very abstract ldeas. Besides remembering the plastic shapes that mean such down-to-earth things as "banana." "chocolate" and "apple." Sarah knows the shapes that stand for "give" and "take," and the names of her human teacher and attendants as well as ber own name.

She knows the aymbols for "good" and "bad," and she can make the value judgments those words imply. Something good is something Dr. Premack likes, something bad is something he disap-proves of. "That isn't any different from the human child whose 'good' and 'bad' are what its parents do or do not approve of," Dr. Premack said.

"One of the fundamental things about language is word order, the way words are assembled to express an idea," Dr. Premack explained. "Some word assem-blies are acceptable—that is, they are grammatical and comprehensible. Others are not, the essential thing is that they

Sarah makes sense. She can organize ber thoughts, and then arrange her plastic words in sentences that express them. She uses plastic shapes where we use sounds, but her sentences observe language rules no less than buman sentences do. Sarah writes sentences by arranging the plastic chips, which have steel backing, on a oragnetized board.

In animal psychology there is something called "Clever Hans phenomenop." named after a German circus horse at the turn of the century that apparently was able to follow complicated verbal instructions. Actually, it performed by observing subtle movements and attitudes of its trainer-movements and attitudes so inconspicuous that they were not noticed by the human audience,

To show that Sarah is not just another "Clever Hans," she has been tested by a trainer who does not know what the plastic shapes mean. Placing the chips on the board, Mary Morgan, one of Sarah's teachers, can write this conditional instruction: "If Sarah take red then Mary give Sarah chocolate." To get the chocolete Sarah reads the sentence and chooses a red object from among several objects of various colors. She understands the negative, too. Mary Morgan will write, "If Sarah take green. Mary no give Sarab chocolate." Then Sarah carefully avoids the green, choosing another color instead.

This understanding of the "if . . . then" concept, or the conditional mood, is proof that Sarah has not merely learned tricks but has actually learned language, Dr. Premack saya. He thinks this compre-hension of the conditional is the one way in which the chimpanzee may be superior in language ability to a child of comparable linguistic achievement that is, a child of 2 or 3 years.

It has been suggested that the devel-opment of a detailed and complete plan for teaching Sarah could be important teaching psychotically withdrawn children to break down the barrier of isolation that keeps them from communicating with others.

But Dr. Premack thinks the main value of his research will be to force linguists to clarify and improve the theories of language. Some psycholinguists think human beings are genetically programmed for lan-Such theorists will either have to say of Sarah that what she does isn't language at all, and that she is just another "Clever Hans." or admit there may be degrees of language among man's close evolutionary relatives.

BIAFRAN GOLD COINS

Last yeer — for the first and only time — the Biefran Government decided to Issue a set of gold coins. Minted under the euspices of the Benk of Sisfra, these coins were declared legal tender designed to commemorate the second anniversary of their secession. Only 3,000 proof sets were euthorised, each comprising coins of £ 25, £ 10, £ 5, £ 2, and £ 1 denominations, and with the £ 25 cnins numbered in sequence. Some countries restrict the import of gold and others sometimes charge customs duty. This is the buyers responsibility. The price of the sets is Swies Frencs 2,000 each, or the aquivalent in another currency. Included in the price is a fitted case bearing the Elafran coat of arms in gold, a numbered cartificate of authenficity, registered postage and packing Orders can be placed through your bank, numismatic agent or Numismaric Trading Associates 136 Route de Chêne, 1224 Geneva.
